Bureau of Agricultural Economics,
U. S. Dept. of Agriculture

FOR WEEK ENDING JULY 12, 1924

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Cantaloupes weakened considerably during the week, principally on account of arrivals of considerable ripe stock from Calif. Standard crates closed at $1.75-2.75; jumbos at $2.25-3.25; few ponies at $1.50-1.75 and flats at 75c-1.25, depending on degree of ripeness. The first car of Ariz. stock arrived Friday, selling at $3.50 for jumbo crates; $3 for standard and $1.25-1.50 for flats. S. C. flats closed at 50c, Georgia flats closed slightly weaker at 60c-65c for best stock, and 30-40c for waxy. Potatoes continued weaker, with a slow demand. Best Eastern Short stock closed at $3.50-3.75, with few sales high as $4. Norfolk section and N. C. stock weakened at $3-3.25. Watermelons have been in slow demand in spite of the weather, with very heavy receipts. Georgia and Fla. Tom Watsons were about unchanged in price, closing at 25-30c, depending on size. Georgia peaches showed a wide range in price, with increasing supply. Six basket carriers of Hillos closed at $1.75-2.50 and Carmons at $1.50-2. Late varieties are expected on the market shortly. The first car of N. C. Early Bosc sold Friday at $1.75-2.25, few $2.50. Tomatoes are stronger, six basket carriers from Md., Ga. and S. C. selling at $2.50-3.50 for fancy and choice quality. Mississippi flats advanced to $1.75-1.85. Texas onions are practically cleaned up, a few sales of Crystal White Wax being made at $2.50-2.75 per std. crate. Virginia hampers are higher at $2-2.25. Egyptian onions higher at $5 per 112 lb. sack, and Spanish cases at $4.50. String beans are arriving from Conn. in heavy supply, closing at $1.50-2. for green and $2.25-3.25 for wax stock per bushel. A large variety of berries is now on the market. N. J. raspberries closed at 8-12c per pint; N. Y. blackberries at 12-25c per qt.; N. J. currants at 12-13c per qt.; cherries 12-13c per qt.; gooseberries at 15c. New Brunswick strawberries opened at 12-25c Friday, Maine stock at 12-20c per qt., and Cape Cod closed at 7-15c. N. C. cucumbers closed at $1.75 per bushel, with poorer stock low at $1. N. Y. peas are weak on account of competition with home-grown. Closing sales were made at 30-75c per bushel.

DAIRY AND POULTRY PRODUCTS

Dressed poultry receipts were moderate but ample to the demand which has been very dull. All prices are unchanged but are harder to get especially on heavy fowl. The tone of the market at the close was very under liberal offerings. Fowl 1 lb. 30-32c, 4-4 1/2 lbs. 25c, 3-3 1/2 lbs. 35-37c, broilers 1-2 lbs. 35-40c. Roasters 19-20c, small 17-18c. LIVE POULTRY steady with receipts about equal to the demand. Fowl 25c, chickens 30c. BUTTER MARKET has ruled sensitive and reacted to the slightest influence. Receipts have been ample and the demand principally for consumptive needs. Prices were lower, at the close. Demand for medium grades seemed to be best. Undergrades were hardest to move. 32 score 41c, 30-31 score 41-41 1/2c, 28-29 score 39-40c, 27 score 38c. EGGS MARKET has ruled steadier. Trade has been fair with buyers critical but willing to pay for quality. Top grades have moved well. Cheap eggs have been in good demand. Current receipts also found better demand. Extras 31-32c, extra firsts 28 1/2-29 1/2c, second 26-26 1/2c. Nearly hennerys 32-35c and all brown up to 35c.

JUDGE LOWELL IN THE FEDERAL COURT

Boston, took a definite stand against the alleged practice of immigration officials in ordering aliens deported as persons likely to become public charges when the facts indicate the contrary. He released Miss Anna Trevisan, 23 years old, a Greek, formerly of Atlantic City. "If you don't like her looks, or the color of their hair or eyes or something, you grab them and call them persons likely to become public charges," said the court. "It's a disgrace." The statement was addressed to Asst. U. S. Atty. John W. Schenck, representing the government against Miss Trevisan.

H., June 23, 1923. An authorized justice of the peace performed the ceremony and the witnesses were all in order.

A SOFT ANSWER

If you are wise, you will be very careful what you say to one in a passion of anger. At such a time a like harsh answer will do just what you do not want to see done because there is irritation enough there already. Meet harshness with harshness and you throw sand, nails, bolts, and monkey wrenches into the gears. A soft answer is pure oil. "A soft answer turneth away wrath but grievous words stir up anger."

UNITED STATES POTATO AVERAGE 98.3% OF LAST YEAR

Farmers have planted almost as many potatoes for the country as they had last year. The totals are 3,753,000 acres in 1924; 3,816,000 in 1923 and 3,853,000, the 5-year average. The 8 major late crop states (Maine, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota) have 95.5% of their 1923 acreages and 93.1% of their 5-year average. Their forecast of production July 1 is 89.3% of last year's harvested crop and 92.5% of their average production. The 12 minor late crop states (South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Utah, Nevada) have 94.1% of their 1923 acreage and 92.4% of their average. July 1 forecast of production is 87.4% of last year and 85.5% of their average crop. July 1 condition of the crop in the late states is somewhat below average.

Acreage of the early crop is 108.1% of last year and the July 1 forecast is for a crop 115.2% of last year's production and 111.9% of the 5-year average. July 1 forecast for the United States crop is 90.4% of the 1923 harvest and 95.5% of the 5-year average crop. The 9 states of large deficit production show a small acreage decrease and condition is about average July 1.

The New England potato acreage is 100.5% of last year and is 226,000 acres against 212,000 last year and 210,000 the 5-year average. Maine, the chief surplus area, shows 5% gain; New Hampshire and Vt. each 8%; Mass. 0%; R. I. 12% and Connecticut 15%. New York has 3% gain, but New Jersey is off 8% and Pennsylvania off 2% while Michigan is off 4%; Wisconsin 8%; Minnesota 8% and No. Dakota 3%. Conditions and returns from the crop the past year have been more favorable in the East than in the Lake states. Acreage in the Lake states, except look county has 101,236 acres against 97,500 last year. The county has about 1 acre in 5 registered for inspection and certification. This is about twice the certified acreage of last year. New England has planted the largest amount of improved seed ever known and has given it better care and this means materially higher yields. The stand is excellent in most cases, and drought to date has hindered the crop but little. Main now is needed over Northern New England to bring the crop on normally. A "condition" report and "forecast" production reflect the outlook for the crop at the particular date and both condition and forecast change as the crop prospect varies.

HAD TO BE HELPED ON WITH HER CLOTHES

For months I was troubled with very sharp pains in the abdomen and could not find any relief the pains were so bad, I had to drop to the floor as they were very sharp; I could not stand. A friend of mine told me about this famous Dr. Donnell's Gall Stone Solvent, so I decided that I would go to him about my troubles, as the other doctors that I had told me it was gall stones. After taking only one bottle of Dr. Donnell's Gall Stone Solvent I passed several stones, and within a month I had obtained what I call a permanent cure, and I feel better to-day than I ever did before. Dr. Donnell's Indian Gall Stone Solvent can be obtained at all leading druggists.

CHAUTAUQUA OPENS AND CLOSURES WITH GREAT PLAYS

"Three Wise Men" and "The Seven Years' War" are the two plays which the Chautauqua experts to select for this year's program that would fit in with the principles of coordination and unification which they had set themselves to accomplish. They say that they have picked just the right production for opening. They say that they wanted a play that is strong, unmitigated entertainment and capable of holding audiences breathless and hushed to the last line and curtain—and, something more—a play that tells something and leaves a worthwhile message. Not a play that moralizes or sermonizes, but a play with a purpose.

So they picked "Three Wise Men" which is by Austin Strong, the author of "The Seventh Heaven."

The characters—a financier, crabbily downhearted, tied to custom. A slow moving physician. A cold, judicial, stern judge.

These three being the "Wise Men" who live together—living in a rut. The rut is the theme of the play, and how these men come out of the rut, the action of the drama. These who help to clear the rut and, unconsciously, almost ruin their lives, are the heroes of the drama—who is not too anxious to work but is a peach of a hockey player, the lady who the "Three Wise Men" had loved as youngsters and her child, as well as her husband and a combination of notorious criminal, detective and house servant.

The events of the play are before the eyes, the arrival of the "child," one month after the "child" arrives the night of the breakthrough, after it and then after that.

"Three Wise Men" ran a year at the Criterion in New York, three months in Philadelphia, six months in Chicago, closing with three months in Boston.

Two lines stand out from the play in our mind: "The Three Old Folks are in a Rut" and

"Buddies" Share Honors
"I Knew She's Innocent—I looked into her Eyes."

The closing day brings "Buddies" a comedy with music—Another hit from the Current Theatre. "Buddies," by George Hober.

It must have been just such a series of conversations that took place "over there" during the World War, as are retold here in sparkling lines by lovable characters. Here is a comedy with surprises, with laughter and with a tribute to the boys. Here is music of a high order and tunes that are unforgettable.

The company of first rate New York players has been produced by Cecil Owen, the noted English actor-producer, whose American successes have been legion. At the present time, in addition to heading the Chautauqua's dramatic department, Mr. Owen is general stage director for the Marcus Loew Stock Companies. Mr. Owen is a Londoner educated at Cambridge. He toured Australia as leading man with Kyrie Bell and Mrs. Brown Potter in repertoire, and supported in this country "Old Heidelberg" and Robert Mantell in Shakespearean repertoire and Jane Cowie in her last three successes. He was associated with Frank Helcher in the production of "Johannes Kreisler" and directed seven companies of "O' My Heart" for the Minors. He produced himself as director many Broadway successes, notably "Toby of the Lamp" and "Giddy Bumpkins" in conjunction with Earl Carroll.

Interesting to Chautauqua audiences is the fact that Mr. Owen produced the original company of "Buddies" for the Helwyns.

By the way, the cast of "Buddies" includes some splendid popular comedians and, in the afternoon, they are presenting what they term "a popular music burlesque." They will sing the choruses of the hits from all the latest musical comedies now on Broadway.

IN A GARDEN

By George Wilson Jennings
On a recent Sunday morning while strolling through the Botanical Gardens of our city, my attention was attracted to an aged couple who by their careful and minute examination showed a great interest in each shrub, plant and tree—and in their conversation referred to many by their botanical names. Being also interested in this particular line, the writer managed to enter into conversation with them and was more than surprised at the wealth of information which they both possessed in regard to floriculture and horticulture.

He learned that during their lifetime they had taken the greatest enjoyment out of the study of Botany, and that even now on pleasant days they visited these wonderful gardens each occasion feeling something new and of interest. They told me that they both had passed beyond the "eightieth milestone" in years, and had travelled in many countries but had never found anything in this line to compare with our own beautiful garden.

In contemplating this pleasant experience one wonders if there is any excuse for allowing age to dull one's life when there is so much of interest in the study and contemplation of Nature itself. In conversation with the aged man, I compared humanity with many types of trees which have about them something majestic and illuminating; and since they cannot change their places, are witnesses of all the changes that take place around them; some reach a great age, they become, as it were, historical monuments, and others like ourselves have a limited life, growing and passing away. Continuing, I observed, "It is the old who plant young trees and are sad upon the arrival of the Autumnal season, and they too are the most delighted and appreciative with the return of the Springtime."

When I bade goodbye to this aged, gifted couple, I thanked them most heartily for their friendliness and for the valuable information which they had given me. The venerable wife, looking intently at me, said in parting, "Good friend, I do not want to seem what is called 'prissy', but there are some things to remember to life if one wishes to be a youth and longevity—follow Nature to the limit. Nature imitates herself, at all events she is very fond of color having made nothing without it; her colors are blue, her fields green, her waters like the sky and her animals, vegetables, minerals all vary in color. She paints a great many of them in apparently bright hues, as if to show the dearest eye how the force of color is a good thing, a principle thrown in to a good mind also brings forth fruit, things which are conducted by the same Master, the root, the branch, the fruit, the principle and the consequence."

What a lesson your writer learned from these venerable students of Nature on that memorable Sunday morning. As I watched the couple pass out of the gates of the garden, I was impressed with the extent of their knowledge and by their lofty sentiments and the thought occurred to me that no better teacher of life has the greatest authority than it is of even greater value than all the prayers and gifts of youth.
